ABSTRACT

The guide provides information about Japan to assist elementary and secondary educators and students. It contains five major categories of information: (1) "Specialists on Japan and Japanese Studies," an extensive state-by-state directory of resource persons who are either Japan scholars at the post-secondary school level or elementary and secondary educators who are knowledgeable about Japan; (2) "Sources of Information," which contains both generalized and specific information and lists groups or institutions related to teaching about Japan; (3) "Curriculum Materials," which includes lessons, activities, and products developed by elementary and secondary educators, outreach centers, and other groups and organizations; (4) "Innovative Programs," which provides examples of innovative practices in teaching about Japan; and (5) "Exchange Programs" which lists programs available for students and educators who wish to visit Japan. FOREWORD

In her classical anthropological study of the Japanese, The Chrysanthemum and the Sword, Ruth Benedict wrote of "giri"--the concept of obligation. "Giri" takes many forms such as duties to family or to non-related persons, but in the main, it means paying debts or obligations to the world.

The Council of Chief State School Officers views this guide and the Japan Database project as a form of "giri," designed to educate the states and territories about the people of Japan. This sense of obligation is specifically directed to the Japan-U.S. Friendship Commission. This commission has been responsible for not only funding this project but also, for many years, assisting the Chief State School Officers by providing funds for exchanges with the Japanese. These programs have allowed many Chief State School Officers to learn about Japan and to share this privilege with other educational leaders in their respective states and territories.

The Council of Chief State School Officers hopes that the information in this guide will be of use in assisting our members to serve better local educators who wish to learn about Japan.

This project continues efforts begun by the Council, through its International Education Office, to increase global knowledge and awareness in the schools. Much of the future of our schools and the nation rests in a knowledge and appreciation of a world that is more economically, socially and politically interdependent than at any other time in human history. Our efforts at international understanding are echoed from the recent past by the poetic words of the Emperor Meiji less than 100 years ago:

> In my garden
> Side by side
> Native plants, foreign plants
> Growing together.

William F. Pierce
Executive Director

PREFACE

The purpose of this guide is to provide information about Japan that will be helpful to elementary and secondary educators and students in the United States and its territories.

This guide contains five major categories of information:

1. Specialists on Japan and Japanese Studies;
2. Sources of Information about Japan;
3. Curriculum Materials on Japan;
4. Activities and Innovative Teaching and Learning Programs about Japan;
5. Educational and Cultural Exchange Programs with Japan.

The foundation for this guide is a computerized database program on Japan developed through a grant from the Japan-U.S. Friendship Commission. The information in each of the five categories was gathered from a variety of sources.

Specialists are either Japan scholars at the post-secondary school level or elementary and secondary educators who are knowledgeable about Japan. Hundreds of scholars and K-12 educators responded to a letter requesting their participation in the Database project.

Sources of Information about Japan were gathered from a variety of places. Groups or institutions directly related to teaching about Japan in the schools are listed under Sources. More general sources are also listed, allowing users to begin with generalized information about Japan, with the expectation that, as their knowledge grew, they would seek out more specific areas of interest.

Curriculum Materials on Japan include lessons, activities, and products developed by elementary and secondary educators, outreach centers, and other groups and organizations concerned with providing resources on Japan for elementary and secondary students and educators. There was no attempt to include those teaching materials on Japan, both print and nonprint, that are available from commercial publishers and media companies.

Activities and Innovative Teaching and Learning Programs about Japan is a category designed to share examples of innovations in teaching about Japan that exist in the states and territories. A few examples emerged from the search, but not as many as anticipated.

Educational and Cultural Exchange Programs include only those available for students and educators in the United States who wish to visit Japan.

The Seikatsu Tsuzurikata movement in Japan--Life Experience Writing--which is a grassroots, philosophically-based theory of composition education and life guidance practiced by teachers in Japan for some sixty years. As a consequence of extensive observations in Japanese elementary schools while studying this movement, I have some insight into Japanese elementary school education in general. My own background includes years of teaching and research/study of writing education, specifically the relationship between language development and cognitive growth.

National Council for the Social Studies (NCSS)
3501 Newark Street, N.W.
Washington, DC 20016
202-966-7840

In addition to offering fellowships to Japan, the NCSS publications program has a number of Japan-related resources, including Perspectives on Japan: A Guide for Teachers (Bulletin #69) and Social Education, May 1981, "Teaching about Japan through Art and Modern Literature" and May 1984, "Teaching Materials on Japan."

Social Science Educational Consortium (SSEC)
Lynn Parisi, Staff Associate
855 Broadway
Boulder, Colorado 80302
303-492-8154

SSEC has recently compiled a 100-item, non-circulating Japan Resources Center.

Global Education Motivators (GEM)
Cora Lee Phillippi
Montgomery County IV23
Paper Mill Road and Montgomery Avenue
Erdenheim, Pennsylvania 19118
215-233-9558

GEM has developed curriculum materials on Japan and has offered an exchange program to Japan. Contact them for more information.

Social Studies Development Center (SSDC)
James Becker, Director
2805 East Tenth Street
Indiana University
Bloomington, Indiana 47405
812-335-3838

SSDC currently houses the Midwest Program for Teaching About Japan. The Center offers a variety of services and publications including Parallel Passages: Contrasting Views from U.S. and Japan and In Search of Mutual Understanding (final report of the Japan/U.S. Textbook Study Project). In addition, they house the ERIC Clearinghouse which conducts information searches on Japan resources.

K. JAPAN ALUMNI

The "Japan Alumni" are those educators who have received fellowships to Japan through the National Council for the Social Studies or the U.S.-Japan Education Group. They have developed a number of free or inexpensive curriculum and reference materials. Information about these materials is available in four catalogues:

- "General Reference Materials on Japan Developed by the Japan Alumni"
- "Elementary Curriculum Units Developed by the Japan Alumni"
- "Middle School Curriculum Units Developed by the Japan Alumni"
- "Junior/Senior High School Level Curriculum Units Developed by the Japan Alumni"

Washington, DC 20250
202-447-2791

Economic Research Service: Contact the Japan analyst in the Asia Section of the International Economic Division for information on Japanese agricultural production and U.S. agricultural exports to Japan.

The Economic Research Service publishes the results of its research activities. Its publications are available to the public at the Government Printing Office Bookstores. The GPO Bookstore has four branches in Washington, D.C., aside from its Central Office at North Capital Street between G and H Streets: at the Departments of Commerce, Defense, Health and Human Services, and State. Call 202-783-3238.

Foreign Agricultural Service: Contact the Deputy Assistant Administrator for East Asia and the Pacific for information concerning U.S. policies toward Japan and U.S.-Japan trade in agricultural commodities.

International Trade Policy Service: The Japan and China officer of the Asia, Africa & Eastern Europe Division is another good source of information regarding U.S. policies toward Japan and U.S.-Japan trade in agricultural commodities.

Department of Commerce
14th Street between Constitution Avenue and
  E Street, N.W.
Washington, DC 20230
202-377-2000

International Trade Administration: Contact the Office of Japan for information on marketing products in Japan and on U.S. commercial policies toward Japan. The office also acts as a "switchboard" to more appropriate desks and officers, depending on the nature of the inquiry.

National Technical Information Service: The primary function of the Service (Sills Building, 5285 Port Royal Road, Springfield, Virginia 22161 (703-487-4600) is to make available to the public the technical information acquired through research done for or by the U.S. government. Since 1981 the Service has collected and disseminated certain kinds of Japanese technical information. The Service's information and sales center is located at 425 Thirteenth Street, N.W., Room 620, Washington, DC 20230. Call 202-724-3382. Inquire by commodity, not geographic area.

202-395-4647

Office of Assistant U.S. Trade Representative for Europe and Japan: The Office of U.S. Trade Representative is directly involved with trade negotiations between the U.S. and various countries, including Japan. The Office of the Assistant U.S. Trade Representative is in charge of various U.S.-Japan trade issues and could be a valuable resource concerning the legal aspects of trade and trade policies.

United States International Trade Commission (ITC)
701 E Street, N.W.
Washington, DC 20436
202-523-0161

Office of Economic Research: The Commission advises the President and Congress on tariff and trade matters. The research office conducts a variety of investigations, public hearings, and research projects pertaining to the international policies of the United States. The Commission also has reading rooms which are open to the public in the Office of the Secretary and in the Commission Library.

United States Information Agency (USIA)
400 C Street, S.W.
Washington, DC 20547
202-485-2982

Office of Research: The United States Information Agency is entrusted with the task of promoting mutual understanding between the people of the United States and those of other countries, while the Office of Research specializes in assessing the impact of U.S. foreign policy decisions on public opinion abroad. The Office has five geographic units, including the East Asia and Pacific Branch where the Japan specialist is located. The Office conducts research on public opinion in priority countries, and prepares daily summaries of foreign media reaction for the president, the Agency's director, and the foreign affairs community.

National Science Foundation
1800 G Street, N.W.
Washington, DC 20550
202-357-7861

International Program Division: The Division administers numerous bilateral, cooperative scientific research activities. By far the most significant of all the bilateral programs is the U.S.-Japan Cooperative Science Program, which has existed since 1961 and has become the model for most of the other bilateral programs administered by the Foundation. The Program, which is administered jointly in Japan by the Japan Society for the Promotion of Science and the Science and Technology Agency, funds research projects concerning education in the sciences; scientific and technical communications; earth, planetary, and astrological sciences; biological, agricultural, and medical sciences; mathematical, physical, and chemical sciences; engineering sciences, and interdisciplinary problems including problems of special current interest. Since 1981, the Division has also administered a newer program entitled the U.S.-Japan Program of Cooperation in Photoconversion and Photosynthesis. This is administered jointly with the U.S. Department of Energy and Japan's Ministry of Education, as well as the Science and Technology Agency.

Japan-United States Friendship Commission
1200 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Room 3416
Washington, DC 20004
202-275-7712

The Commission was established by the U.S. Congress in 1975 to promote scholarly, cultural, and artistic activities between Japan and the United States. Japanese government repayments for U.S. facilities built in Okinawa and other postwar American assistance to Japan contribute to the Commission's funds. The Commission provides grants to projects in the areas of (1) Japanese studies (for Americans); (2) American studies (for Japanese); (3) the arts; and (4) research and programs for public education. In fiscal year 1983, the Commission awarded a total of approximately $2.23 million in grants.

Congressional Research Service
Library of Congress
Washington, DC 20540

The Congressional Research Service works exclusively for the Congress, conducting research, analyzing legislation, and providing information at the request of committees, members, and their staff. The Service has some 600 specialists distributed among seven research divisions, including Economics, Foreign Affairs and National Defense, and Science and Technology Policy, some of whom have accumulated a substantial degree of expertise on Japan. This service, however, is not available to the public.

Library of Congress
10 First Street, S.E.
Washington, DC 20540
202-287-5430/31

Japanese Section: The Section houses perhaps the largest and most comprehensive collection of resources on Japan in the United States. Its collection consists of more than 650,000 volumes in Japanese, 16,000 periodical titles, and more than 5,000 reels of microfilm. Topics covered include general works, philosophy, religion, Japanese history, geography, anthropology, social sciences and economics, political science, law, education, music and fine arts, language and linguistics, literature, science and technology, military science, and bibliographies. The collection has special strengths in the humanities, social sciences, and particularly in its periodical holdings in the areas of science and technology. Furthermore, it boasts a remarkable collection of research works on Asia and the Pacific region written by the Japanese government before and during World War II. The section also possesses comprehensive sets of Japanese government publications received on an exchange basis. The Japanese section has about 35 staff members, including professional reference librarians and Japan specialists who stand ready to assist visitors, answer telephone inquiries, and reply to correspondence from researchers in the United States and abroad.

Office of Technology Assessment
600 Pennsylvania Avenue, S.E.
Washington, DC 20510
202-224-3695 (Director)
202-224-8996 (Publications)

The purpose of this Office, maintained by Congress, is to help legislative leaders anticipate the direction and degree of technological changes and examine the way these changes affect people's lives. The Office, upon the request of Congress, studies the industrial competitiveness of various sectors, and is also called upon to assess Japanese technology and industrial capabilities.
